As the tournament wound down and the weigh-in came to a close, the children of the audience were called to the stage. Rods and reels presented by American Rodsmiths' were given out to the "future of our sport." With smiles on their faces, the children began to explore their new prizes.

Every fishing story that was told as the day winded down seemed to include "crank baits" as that was the star of the day for the lunkers.

Each of the Chambers of Commerce had a design in mind when putting this circuit together. First, creating a fun, "off season" tournament series that visited each of the four counties on Sam Rayburn and Toledo Bend. By doing this, it also helps to extend the tourism season in our areas. This also procreates hotel/ motel occupancies to help keep much needed tourism dollars flowing.

This circuit is open to everyone, so grab a partner and join us Oct. 6 at Lowes Creek Park on Toledo Bend. Visit www.texasforestcountry.com for news and events all over the East Texas lakes area.

PHIL HENDERSON and Perry Hooks took second place with 20.28 lbs. and are congratulated by the Chamber and tournament directors.

Halloween comes early to state park

A massive spider web first spotted covering several acres of oak-elm woodlands along a Lake Tawakoni State Park trail in early August and later reported in a Fort Worth Star-Telegram story on Aug. 29 made national and international headlines throughout the Labor Day Weekend.

An arachnophobe's worst nightmare, the gauzy, insect-laden web drew more than 3,300 curious visitors over the three-day holiday to this 376-acre park on the shore of Lake Tawakoni, 50 miles east of Dallas. On Labor Day, the park recorded 1,275 people visiting just to see the web.

"When I first saw it," said Park Superintendent Donna Garde, "I was totally amazed. What ran through my mind was that this looked like something out of a low-budget horror movie, but I was looking at something five times as big as what you'd see on a Hollywood set."

Stumped as to the web's origin, the initial consensus of arachnologists and entomologists who saw an online photo of the web sent by Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologist Mike Quinn was that it may have resulted from a "mass dispersal" event. In such an event, millions of tiny spiders or spiderlings spin out silk filaments to ride air currents in a phenomenon known as "ballooning."

Quinn collected a sample of spiders Aug. 31 from in and around the gigantic web and took them to Texas A&M University in College Station for analyses. Entomology Department researcher Allen Dean identified 11 spider families from the sample. The most prevalent species was the Tetragnatha guatemalensis, or what Quinn dubbed the Guatemalan long-jawed spider, since this species didn't have a common name. Guatemala was the country in which it was first documented.

Superintendent Garde said Sept. 5 that the crowds coming to see the wondrous creation had slowed to a trickle, and that they were not being allowed to access the nature trail due to the sloppy conditions.

"It was fun, but we were really tired," Garde said. "The spiders are great little guys. They put our park on the map."
